Allied Observers Hint New, Vast Development in War

LONDON, Nov. 27 (UPI)—Responsible observers tonight expected the disclosure at any time—possibly within a matter of days—of developments among the most momentous of the entire war.

The predicted developments were said to be of such a nature as to Events were expected by the observers to strike at the civilian populations and military forces of both axis powers with results possibly more far-reaching than any previous development with the possible exception of the United States entry into the war.

The developments, commentators said, were expected to have the effect of a great rallying call from the allies to the axis-dominated peoples of Europe and the far east.

But with any such call the allies presumably would warn the over-run peoples that they must not let premature action wreck the potential power of the role they can play in helping the allies when under cover of one of the war's most intensive "bomb barrages," allied headquarters announced today. The exact extent of the gains yesterday in a drive toward enemy hill positions was not disclosed. From three high strong points, German tanks poured a destructive fire into the fifth army's hard-won bridgehead across the river. Flooded by more than a two-foot rise, the river now is 1,000 feet wide in some places.

On the other end of the Germans' winter line across Italy, the American fifth army smashed two counter-attacks against their footholds in the mountains west of Venafro, from which it threatens a broad

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27 (AP)—Senator Lucas, D. Ill., co-author of a bill to provide men and women in the armed services with a war ballot for next year's election, said today he would resist any further attempts to alter the measure—due for an amendment battering when it comes up on the senate floor Monday.

Some Republican support developed ed later in the week behind a substitute by three southern Democrats which would kill the war ballot and put in its stead a simple directive to the states calling on them to make arrangements for absent voters.

Looted Nations Demand Plan For Return of Nazi Plunder

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Nov. 27 (AP)—Delegates of invaded nations said today they wanted the United Nations relief and rehabilitation administration to provide means able to rebuild an entire new war machine.

He said he believed that unless Germany was kept to strict account this time UNRRA might as well be-whereby Germany's loot could be sifted for stolen cultural treasures and productive machinery.

Associating themselves with the Dutch delegation, headed by the D. Crenca de Jongh who made the suggestion that the return of art objects and machinery was a permanent organization so that it will be ready to deal with the destruction of the third world war.

The provision to cover the return of art objects and machinery was granted as a routine matter by the immigration department. During their residence here De gation, were delegates of Belgium, Czechoslovakia, the French committee, Greece, Luxembourg, Norway, Poland and Yugoslavia.

In even a stronger statement, Norwegian Ambassador Wilhelm

Munthe De Morgenstern said at a press conference that he considered it "most important" that the enemy be made to pay for any relief work done in its territory since the contention after the last war that Germany was not to be paid for its own business without reimbursement of the government's share.

De Morgenstern was requested especially to leave Nations' committee to British, Eskimos and Indians, and had been acquired, of course, as

FORMER WARDEN TO SEEK OFFICE

BOISE, Nov. 22—C. Van Clark, former county penitentiary warden and land commissioner, became the first Idahoan to dedicate himself for office in 1944 by announcing today he would be a candidate for auditor as an independent of state on the Democratic ticket.

Clark, now employed as a special engineer at Harry Esker's Steam Land Shipyards at Portland, Ore., is in Boise for a two weeks' visit with himself for office in 1944 by announcing today he would be a candidate for auditor as an independent of state on the Democratic ticket.

"Before I left the state last April," said Clark, "I knew I was going to come back and run for secretary of state."

Clark's post now is held by George H. Curtis, who is serving his third term and who may run for governor next year.

Clark resigned as warden last March, effective April 1, because he was "not receiving cooperation at the state prison."

He served at the prison for 30 months, assuming that post in 1931 in transfer from the land commissioner's job to which he had been appointed March 1, 1931. He served as sheriff of Fremont county four years from 1925 to 1930.

Clark was succeeded at the penitentiary as warden by the present incumbent, Sam Pearce.

Carnegie Hero Medal for Man

HAGERMAN, Nov. 21—Mrs. Charles A. Langbush has received word that her nephew, Harold McIntire, Tama, Ia., a frequent Hagerman visitor, has been awarded the Carnegie Hero medal and $500 for his act of bravery in saving the life of Mrs. Stella Miller, Tama, last Jan. 19.

The incident happened at the Northwestern depot, crossing in the early morning. Mr. McIntire was waiting at the crossing as a fast passenger train was approaching. Mrs. Miller, coming from the opposite direction, attempted to cross and fell on the ice between the rails. Mr. McIntire jerked her clear of the track just as the train rolled by.

Jerome Plant Resumes Work

JEROME, Nov. 21—The Jerome Food Products company plant, resumed operations Friday with only a skeleton shift, after having been closed down the past few days for inflation of recently arrived equipment.

The plant is expected to get underway in normal operation at the beginning of next week. It was announced today by officials.

The new test pump and steam pump have both been installed and the plant will begin night and day runs with about 125 workers employed.

About one-quarter of all United Nations tonnage is in Liberty ships.

Avert New War, Lecturer Urges

JEROME, Nov. 21—Highly successful was the men's "Victory dinner" in the Jerome Presbyterian church with Dr. Vernon Booth, nationally recognized lecturer in the field of postwar planning, as the speaker.

Dr. Booth's address was on "After the War—What?" He was introduced by H. Mahe Shoun, minister of ceremonies. The dinner was prepared under direction of Mrs. C. P. Smith, president of the women's association of the church, and Mrs. J. T. Stille, Jr.

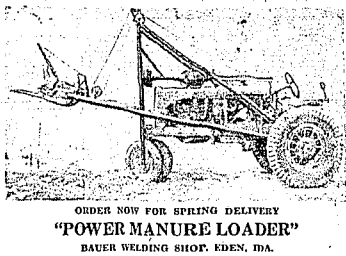

Dr. Booth, a leading exponent of world federation said that "today there is a wide and growing recognition that winning the war will only the first call of our task. We must also insure and permanent ways of preventing such horrors from descending upon the world again."

All proceeds of the dinner will go toward the building debt fund.

DOCTOR'S WIFE?

CHAPTER XX

Nancy went white, and then red. She cried, frantically. "How did you know about him?" and then before her mother could answer, she added, "Never mind. I suppose you know."

"I might have known," Nancy told her. She rose and walked to a window. She said, over her shoulder, "Well, you think, if you don't mind. Only perhaps you understand why. If Frank had asked me, I might have considered."

"I don't understand you at all," her mother blurted out.

"You needn't try," said Nancy. She slipped from the room and encountered her father on the landing.

"Busy office?" "One infected finger, one bad digestion, one summer cold," he reported. "And one all just now. Zing, zing, zing!"

Nancy flew down the stairs, and through the small living room to the office corridor. She could hear Jim moaning about in the office. She knocked and went in.

"Glad to see you," he said. "Right away?" "Where?" "In the city?"

"Take me home," she demanded. "I'm bored stiff. Frank and Emily are billing and cooing under your nose. Let's go out the office door, and avoid them."

She put her hand on his arm and he picked up his bag and they went out together. He said warningly, "You may have something of a walk."

"I don't mind. It's a beautiful night."

In the car he asked, heading away from the house.

"Frank and Emily, you said?" "Of course. He's mad about her, didn't you know that?"

"No," said Jim, slowly, readjusting his ideas. "I thought it was—yes."

Nancy laughed. "I tried hard," she said with her sparkling frankness, "but he wasn't having any."

"He doesn't seem Emily's type," Jim commented slowly, "not that he isn't a swell guy and that."

"Yes," she said disinterestedly, "very stupid about doctors. They haven't the faintest idea of what men women like, really."

She leaned back and laughed a little. "Type or no type, he's in the best of men's minds."

"Do you think that Emily?" "She hasn't confided in me. He asked her to marry him tonight, she went on. She eloped it for all Atlantic street to hear. And I have good ears. She'd be crazy not to, of course."

"But her work—" he began.

"Oh, work," said Nancy lightly. "Emily's no different from thousands of other girls working to make ends meet. A man comes along. Mind you, I'm not saying that she doesn't like her work. But liking work and being a man are two different states of mind."

He said, "You're the strangest girl."

"I always think of her as wholly wrapped up in what she's doing."

"But not, humorously said, Nancy told him. 'Drive faster—you're a doctor going on a call. No one will stop you. It's the sort of night I'd like to drive and drive.'"

He said, "You're the strangest girl."

"Why, because I like to drive fast and not just like you?" she asked. "I'd like to drive fast and not just like you?"

"I'd like to drive fast and not just like you?" she asked. "I'd like to drive fast and not just like you?"
